Why are you unlikely to challenge?

- Afraid of retaliation / repercussions / backlash
- I avoid confrontation - it could make things worse if I spoke up and get attacked
- Basically, it is none of my business, and I would more than likely get attacked
- If women just ignored these comments men would get bored and stop
- Don't want the attention drawn onto me
- Because perhaps the woman encouraged it
- Can't challenge everything every time I step out the door
- It's not for me to challenge - I would notify the police if needed
- I feel it would be the woman's place to challenge if they wanted to
- I don't get involved with things that don't concern me
- I have been physically attacked previously for doing so
- What's the point? Nothing would change

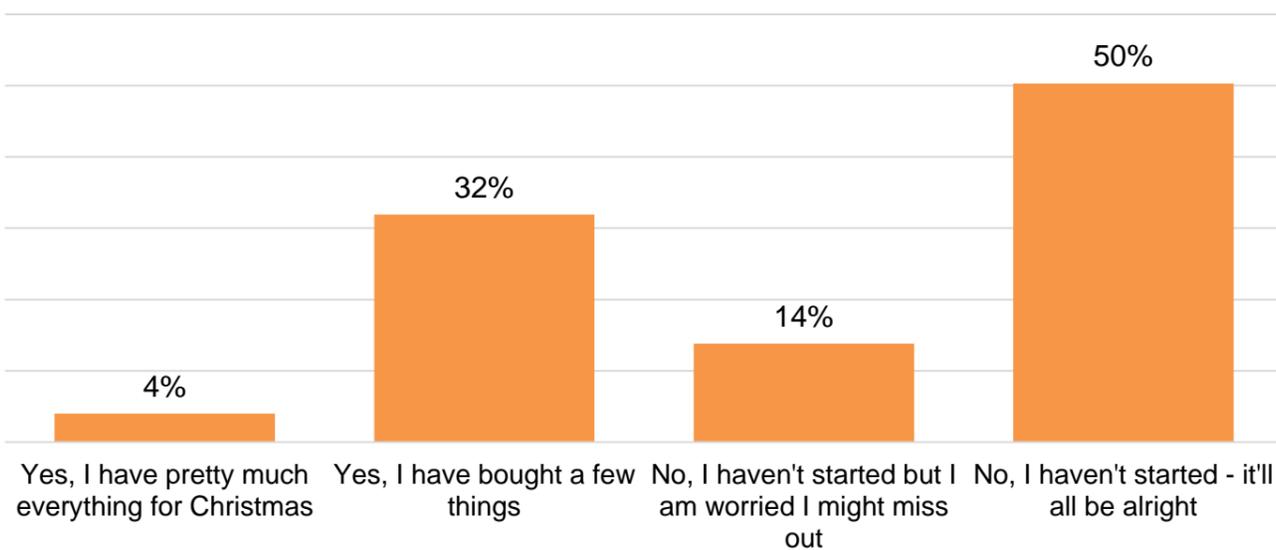

Why do you think this behaviour doesn't need challenging?

- Some women / young girls dress inappropriately and like the attention
- I do not believe the majority of women / girls take this as a serious problem
- I have always enjoyed men wolf whistling at me
- I am of the old school where wolf whistling etc isn't a problem. Women need to get a backbone
- Grow up. If it is unwanted; ignore, walk on by, shrug it off
- My generation aren't the snow flake generation that's now ...oooh you can't say that
- It is harmless & some women take it as a boost to their day
- Double standards exist with minor banter, both sexes do this, and it hurts nobody
- It is just banter and women need to learn to rise above it
- We are too sensitive these days and sometimes it can be a compliment
- Women have enjoyed being whistled at for decades
- It's a part of life. Women need to be better educated on how to repel and respond
